

The Washington Post

Exciting events for families during 2010 National Cherry Blossom Festival

Friday, April 2, 2010
Amy Orndorff

Cherry blossoms, with their soft white and pink colors bursting in unison, are at their peak bloom now. So while the National Cherry Blossom Festival began last week, there is no better time to enjoy the blooms than this weekend -- before they float away for another year. We have picked a handful of can't-miss events; for the complete schedule, visit

Saturday

TWELFTH ANNUAL CHERRY BLOSSOM FREEDOM WALK Saturday 9 a.m. to noon. Learn about Japanese American experiences during World War II including life in camps and military service. The non-competitive walk honors their experiences. National Japanese American Memorial, D Street and New Jersey Avenue NW. <http://www.ncbfreedomwalk.org>. Free, donations accepted.